

MUSIC THROUGH THE DECADE: 1962

The dance craze was high and contemporary folk was finding its way through the grapevine. Let's swing our hips back to 1962.

Welcome to the year that centered on a trio of peace-loving newcomers and a time where we celebrated all four seasons. You're listening to XYZ. Tune in and turn on for this TRIP OF LOVE.

Hail a cab over to 5th Ave, Tiffany & Co, where the illustrious Audrey Hepburn escapes from the reds.

Our first song was featured in the movie "Breakfast at Tiffany's". Henry Mancini and Johnny Mercer wrote this song earning them both Oscars.

Mercer's inspiration for this lovely tune was his childhood memories of the waterways of Savannah, Georgia. Escape from the reds and ease your mind with Moon River.

00:00 – 00:47 [https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=L_jglezosVA]

This next tune introduced contemporary folk. Peter, Paul and Mary wrote music that hit deep and evoked hope during those troubled times.

Their debut album dominated the charts and featured this hit song. This particular album was listed in the Billboard Magazine Top Ten for ten months. Sit back and enjoy Where Have All The Flowers Gone.

00:00 – 00:42 [<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1QZq-wKaBWc>]

Four men from New Jersey became one of the most popular rock bands of this era. Their first number one hit, Sherry, was inspired by the song Hey! Baby. This tune took 15 minutes to write and was originally titled after the first lady, Jackie Kennedy. Dance the night away with this tune.

00:00 - 00:48 [<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AapxXRIsdwA>]

That's all for our third installment of XYZ, cats. Go all the way with us next week as we take a trip with the heartthrobs of the British Invasion and more. Peace and blessings.

DO NOT COPY